- Do you have a meeting place that we can use every month? We are still in search of a new place. Bring your ideas to the May meeting.

Ok, on one stop of Bart's many travels, is a place called Frank & Son's. It is a cool place in California that he visits from time to time. While they do lots of Hot Wheels, they have other collectibles there as well. Bart tells stories of rainbow collections of redlines, complete pink sets, complete purple sets, lots of RRRumblers and some cars that the average HWer will never see. His friend Cookie Lind lives in Cali and has a booth there himself. They meet on Wednesday nights and have a unique show planned for the collectors. Sounds like we need to visit that place when we are there in October for the next BIG Convention.

Thanks Bart for sharing your pics and information.

A WORD FROM ROBERT...

Hi all,

Hope everyone is doing well. As far as I can tell things are starting to slow down as far as Hot Wheels are concerned. Looks like we are getting a chance to catch a breath with out having to chase another new release.

Whew.....

The prospects are not looking good for having a show in June due to not having a decent/affordable place to hold it at. So far everywhere I have heard about has not paned out. If there is anyone who might have any leads on an affordable show and or meeting place Please check it out and have any info at the next meeting. We will be voting on the open VP position also at the 5/24/03 meeting at Reed Park. We will need ALL committee members at this meeting to get together after the regular meeting.

Hope to see you there.

Robert

From the HWC, RLC Sneak Peeks section:
“Check it out, straight from the plant, here are the first shots out of our new tools!!! Yesterday, as HWC Ray and I unwrapped the package from the plant, we felt like we were truly witnessing a part of Hot Wheels history, seeing these legendary castings returned to life. In order to preserve the integrity of the original castings and original red line collecting, we worked with the design team to make minor changes to all of the re-toolings for the year.”

SWEET!!!!
